I. RECOMMENDATIONS

The following is a summation of the final recommendations of the Select Special Committee on Electoral Boundaries. Approval of these recommendations by the Legislative Assembly means that all 83 electoral divisions will see some changes. These changes may be minimal in some cases; however, most will be major and significant. The committee recognizes that change is often difficult but believes it to be vital in order to provide a fair and equitable electoral system that will serve all Albertans into the decades of the future.

A. Number of Electoral Divisions:

The number of electoral divisions in Alberta shall remain at 83.

B. Basis for Redistribution:

The basis shall be total population using the most recent federal census statistics when the Electoral Boundaries Commission is formed (for present purposes this means using the 1986 census results).

C. Percentage Variation Formula and Electoral Division Definitions:

Percentage Variation Formula between Ridings may be up to + or - 25% from the provincial average of electoral division population with extreme criteria to -50%.

In establishing electoral divisions the commission shall consider the following;

1. Sparsity and density of population.
2. Community interests including Indian reservations, Metis settlements, special areas and improvement districts.
3. Number of municipalities, school boards, hospital boards, et cetera.
4. Geographical features including existing road systems.
5. Understandable, clear boundaries.

A single-municipality electoral division is one where the entire division is within one municipality.

A multi-municipality electoral division is one where the division includes two or more municipalities.

Single-municipality electoral divisions shall be:

Calgary: 19 electoral divisions
 Edmonton: 17 electoral divisions
 Lethbridge: 2 electoral divisions
 Medicine Hat: 1 electoral division
 Red Deer: 1 electoral division
 St. Albert: 1 electoral division
 Sherwood Park: 1 electoral division
 Ft. McMurray: 1 electoral division

Total of 43 electoral divisions

Multi-municipality electoral divisions shall include;

Part of city of Red Deer
 Part of city of Medicine Hat
 Part of city of St. Albert
 City of Grande Prairie to be split
 Other cities and smaller centres. May include parts of Calgary or Edmonton.

Total of 40 electoral divisions

At least 95% of the 83 electoral divisions shall meet +or- 25% criteria. Up to 5% of the 83 may be given special consideration with a variance up to -50%. The criteria for "special consideration" electoral divisions shall be:

1. Total area of electoral division over 20,000 square kilometres
2. Total settled (surveyed) area over 15,000 square kilometres
3. Communication and transportation: at least 1,000 kilometres of primary and secondary highways
4. Community and diversity of interests of the inhabitants
5. Distance from capital at least 150 kilometres
6. No population centre over 4,000
7. Sudden and dramatic loss of population, due to economic factors, as indicated by comparing the previous and current Federal Census.

Electoral divisions must meet 4 of the 7 criteria to be considered as a "special consideration" electoral division.

D. Composition of Commission:

Chairman: judge or retired judge appointed by Lieutenant-Governor in Council

Chief Electoral Officer

2 citizens at large nominated by the Premier)
1 citizen at large nominated by Leader of)	Appointed through the Official Opposition in consultation)	Speaker of the
with leaders of the other opposition parties)	Assembly

At least two of the five shall be from Alberta cities and at least two of the five from outside Alberta cities.

Administrative support shall be provided by the Senior Administrator of the Select Special Committee on Electoral Boundaries.

E. Instructions to the Commission:

- 1. Instruction to the commission shall be in the form of Legislation.
- 2. The commission shall be deemed to have been struck on the day the Bill receives Royal Assent.
- 3. The commission shall, after considering any representations to it and within nine months of the date on which the commission is struck, submit to the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly a report which shall delineate the boundaries of the proposed electoral divisions.
- 4. The commission shall, after considering any further representations made to it and within six months of the date it submits its report, submit to the Speaker any amendments to its report that it considers advisable.

F. Length of Time Between Redistributions:

Length of time between redistributions shall be after every second election but not less than every eight years. The Chief Electoral Officer shall report, following each Canadian Census, any variation outside the + or - 25% range.

G. Other Recommendations:

1. The Legislative Assembly should reaffirm its commitment to balanced growth throughout the Province. This may be achieved, where appropriate, by decentralizing government services and working with the private sector on diversification strategies.
2. All-party standing, select and special select committees holding meetings throughout Alberta, where appropriate, should be used more frequently.
3. The Special Standing Committee of the Assembly on Members' Services should review support provided to members with an emphasis on attention to large, scattered constituencies with sparse and/or scattered population.

II. BACKGROUND

A. History of Alberta's Electoral Boundaries

Alberta has an interesting and sometimes colourful electoral boundary history. The system by which members of the Legislature of Alberta were elected was adapted and revised as the population of eligible voters increased or shifted from one region to another. There have been 15 changes in the total number of Members of the Legislative Assembly from 1905 to date. In 1905 when Alberta's Legislature opened, Albertans were represented by 25 Members of the Legislative Assembly each of whom represented one electoral district (see map on page 7). Each electoral district had an average of approximately 1,006 voters. This figure was based on the number of people who actually voted. In 1905 enumerated eligible elector lists were not available. A total of 25,163 people voted in Alberta's first election compared with the 831,240 people who voted in 1989.

In 1909 the Assembly increased from 25 to 41 Members with Edmonton and Calgary each having two members elected by preferential ballots (see map on page 8). Dual-member constituencies meant that Edmonton and Calgary representatives shared the same electoral district. To make it even more interesting, electors in Calgary and Edmonton were permitted to vote twice.

The following election, in 1913, saw Calgary divided into three electoral districts whereas Edmonton continued to be represented by two Members of the Legislative Assembly to represent the whole of the city. This election also produced one of the more curious anomalies in Alberta's electoral history. Individuals were allowed to be candidates in more than one electoral district. In 1913 the Honourable C.W. Cross ran in both Edmonton and Edson, won in both places and represented both as a Member of the Legislative Assembly in the Legislature. There were 56 Members of the Legislative Assembly elected in the 1913 election (see map on page 9).

In 1917 special arrangements were made due to the First World War. Single-member constituencies with plurality victories existed, however, two wartime variations occurred: (i) sitting members serving in the armed forces were automatically returned without an election in their district, and (ii) Alberta soldiers and nurses elected two representatives by special provincewide ballot. The two additional representatives thus increased the number of Members of the Legislative Assembly to 58 (see map on page 10).

In 1921 Alberta introduced multi-member constituencies in Edmonton and Calgary and a dual-member constituency in Medicine Hat. Each voter cast as many votes as there were members to be elected in their district. Plurality victories were required in single-member districts while the highest total in multi-member constituencies determined the winners. Sixty-one Members of the Legislative Assembly were elected with an average of 4,888 votes cast in each district (see map on page 11).

In 1926 (see map on page 12) all the constituencies were single-member except for Edmonton and Calgary, which were multi-member districts varying from five to seven members between 1926 and 1955 inclusive. By 1955 (see map on page 16) the number of Members of the Legislative Assembly had returned to 61 from a high of 63 in the 1930 and 1935 elections and a low of 57 in the 1940, 1944 and 1948 elections (see map on page 14). In 1959 the number increased to 65 (see map on page 17).

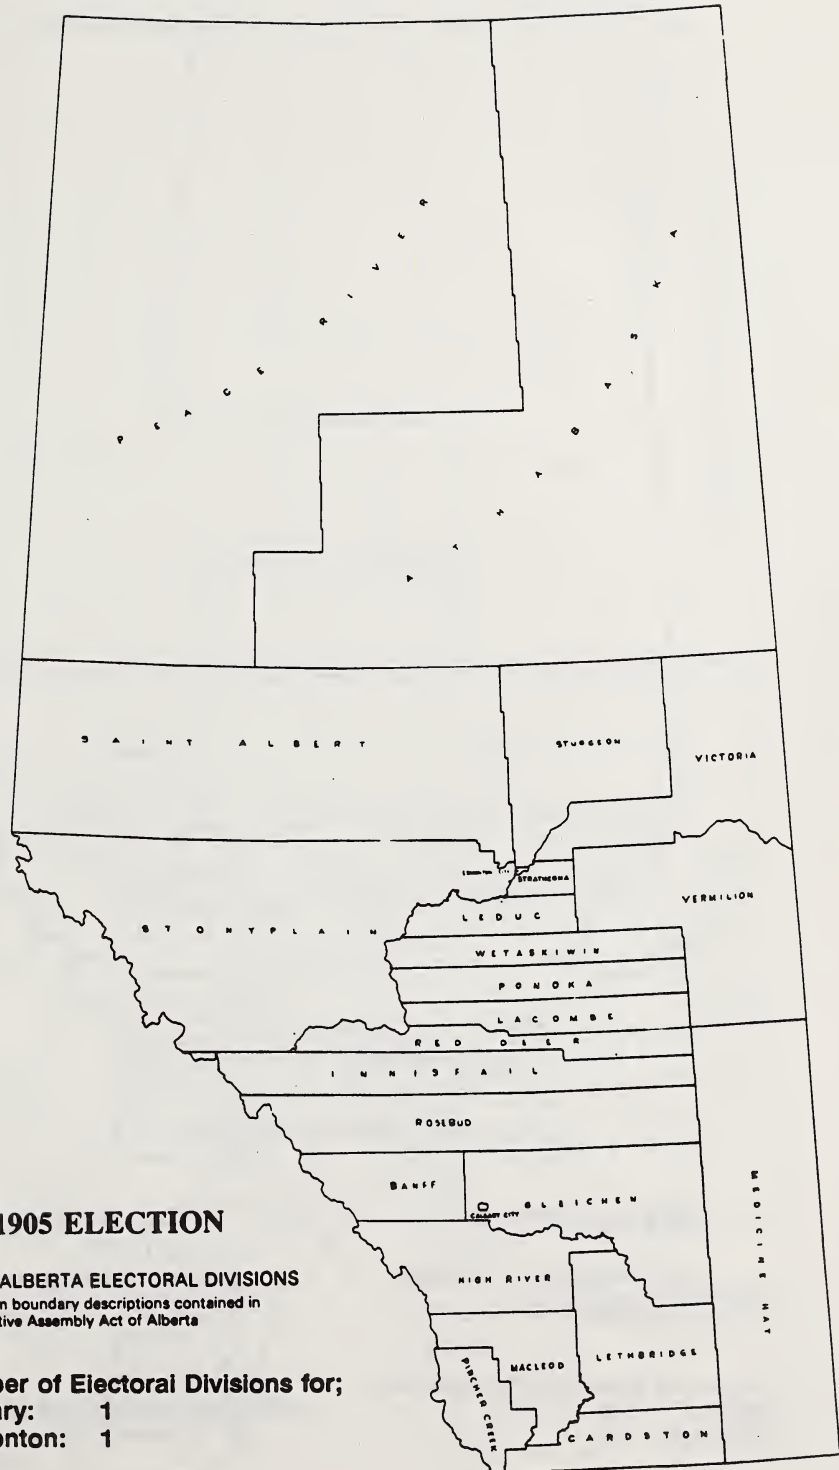

Since 1959 lists of eligible voters have been prepared through the process of enumeration. The first time Albertans were surveyed to determine if they were eligible to vote was 1959. Following the election actual numbers of votes cast could be compared with the lists of eligible voters. Prior to 1959 the only indication that the government had of voter population was based on the previous election turnout at the polls. In 1955, for example, the total number of votes cast in the province was 378,179. However, in 1959, 413,516 people voted of the 649,678 people eligible. With 65 electoral districts this averaged 6,362 eligible voters per member. Edmonton and Calgary were divided into five and seven electoral districts, respectively (see map on page 17).

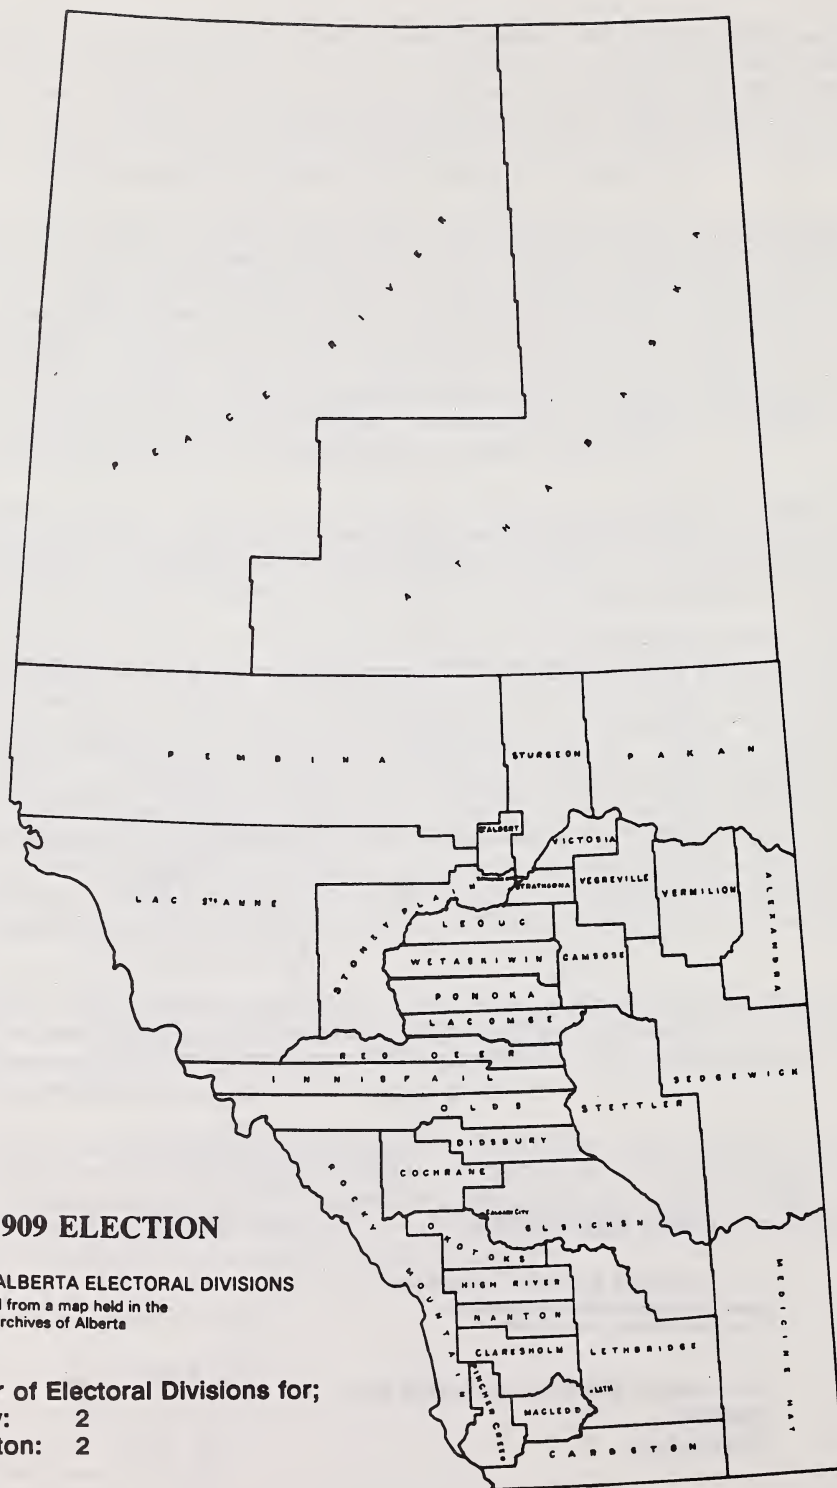

Between 1963 and 1971 the number of Members of the Legislative Assembly increased from 63 to 75. The electoral boundaries were adjusted to accommodate the needed increase for legislators (see maps on pages 18 to 24). In 1975 the number of Members of the Legislative Assembly remained at 75 (see maps on pages 22 to 24).

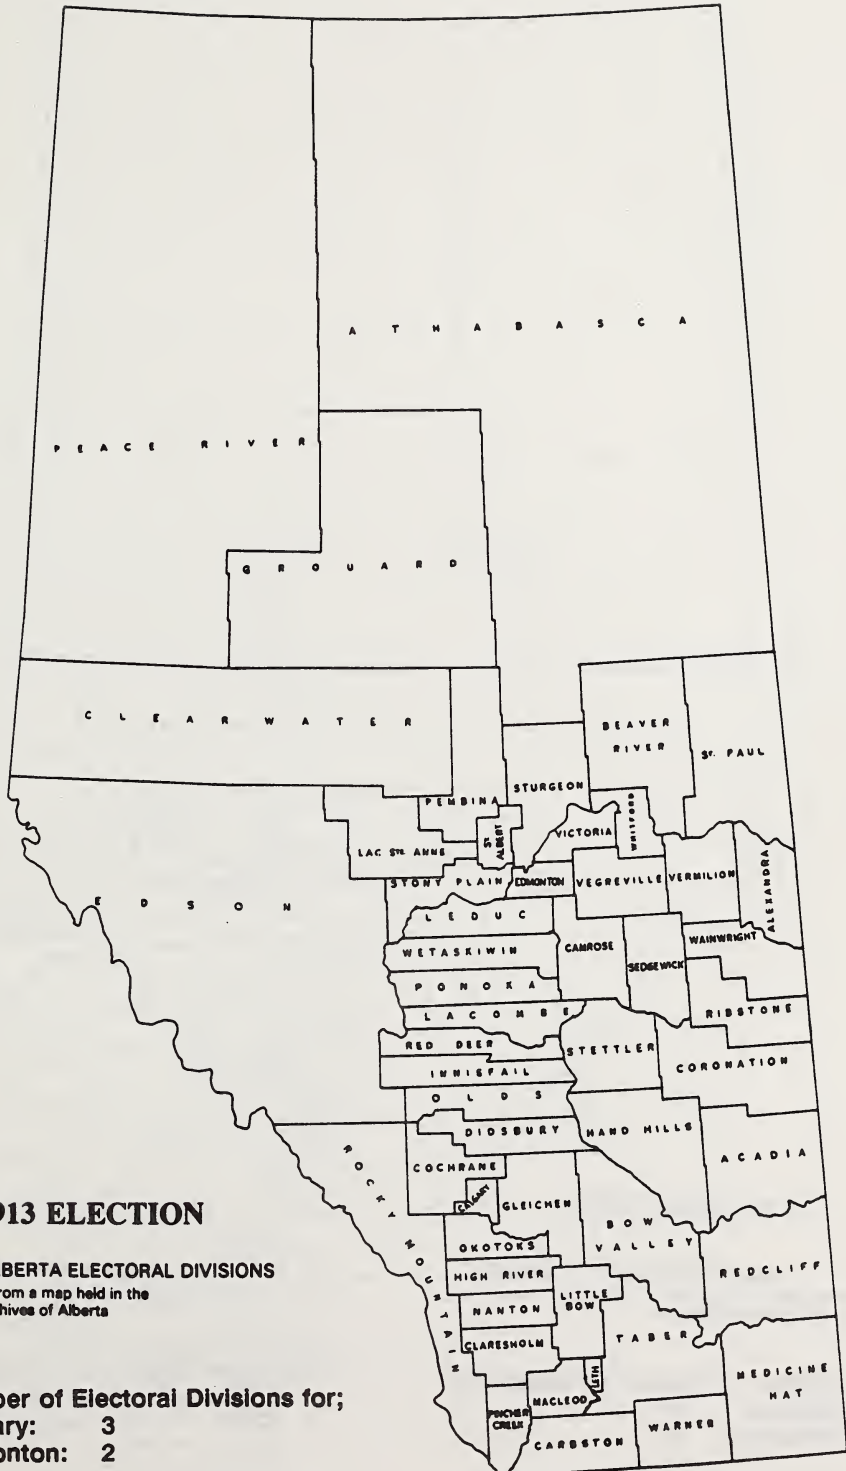

In 1979 the number of constituencies increase to 79. As well, the 1979 election was the first election in Alberta's history to be administered by a Chief Electoral Officer for Alberta. The office and position were established in 1977 to provide for the ongoing administration of elections by a non-partisan appointee of the Legislature. Previously, the Clerk of the Assembly administered the elections in Alberta. However, given the increasing enormity of the task and the need for ongoing administration, it was decided to create a special office for the administration of Alberta's provincial elections and other provincewide votes. The establishment of the Chief Electoral Officer's office and the development of enumeration lists of eligible voters contributed to a more precise analysis of the distribution of eligible voters within the province and subsequent determination of electoral boundaries by Electoral Boundaries Commissions (see maps on pages 25 to 27).

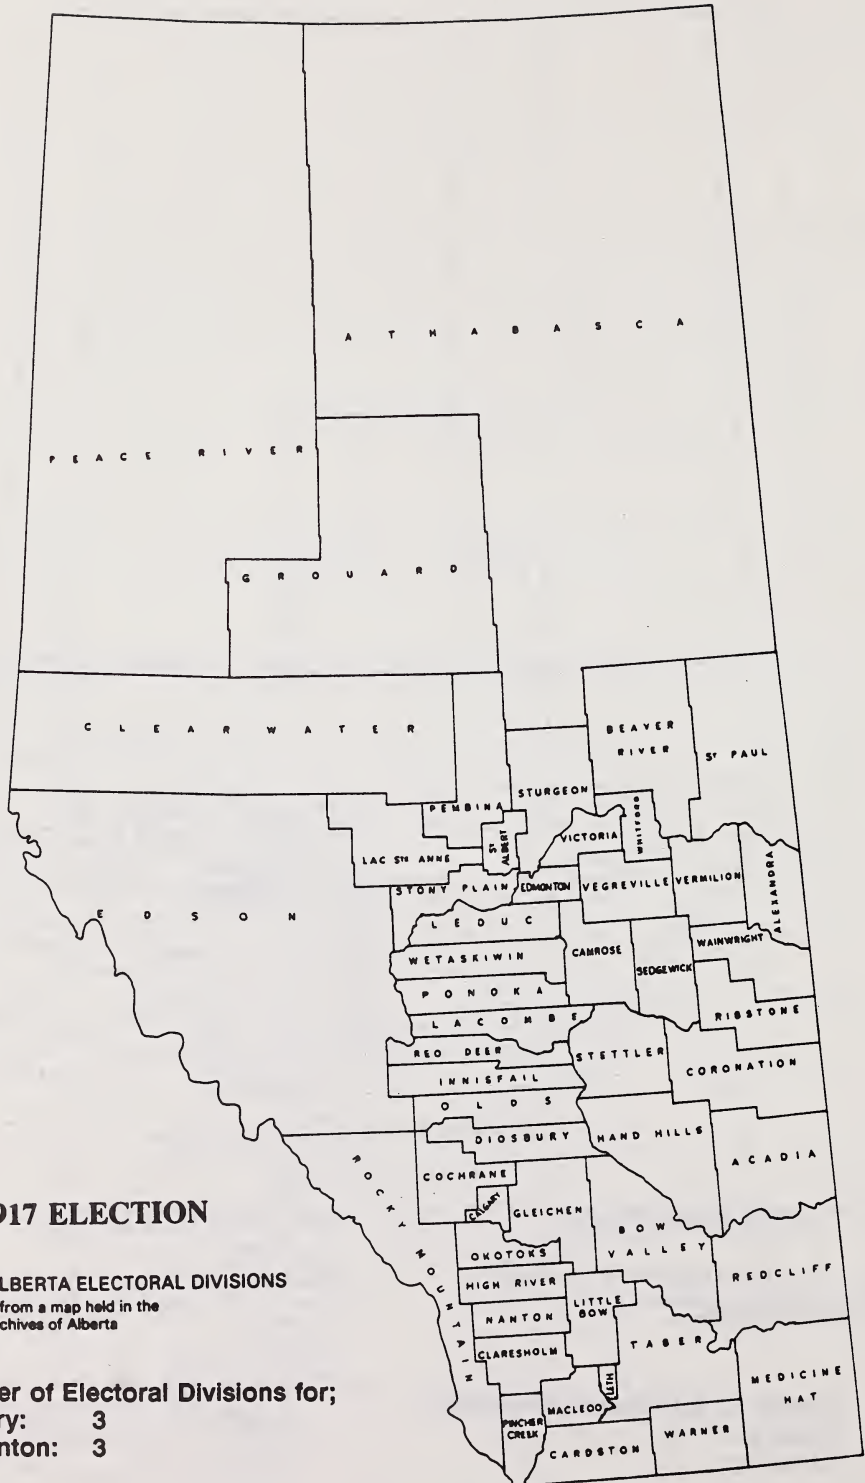

Electoral Boundaries Commissions have been appointed by the Lieutenant Governor in Council as required by the Electoral Boundaries Commission Act. The last Boundary Commission was appointed in 1983 following the 1982 general election (see maps on pages 28 to 30).

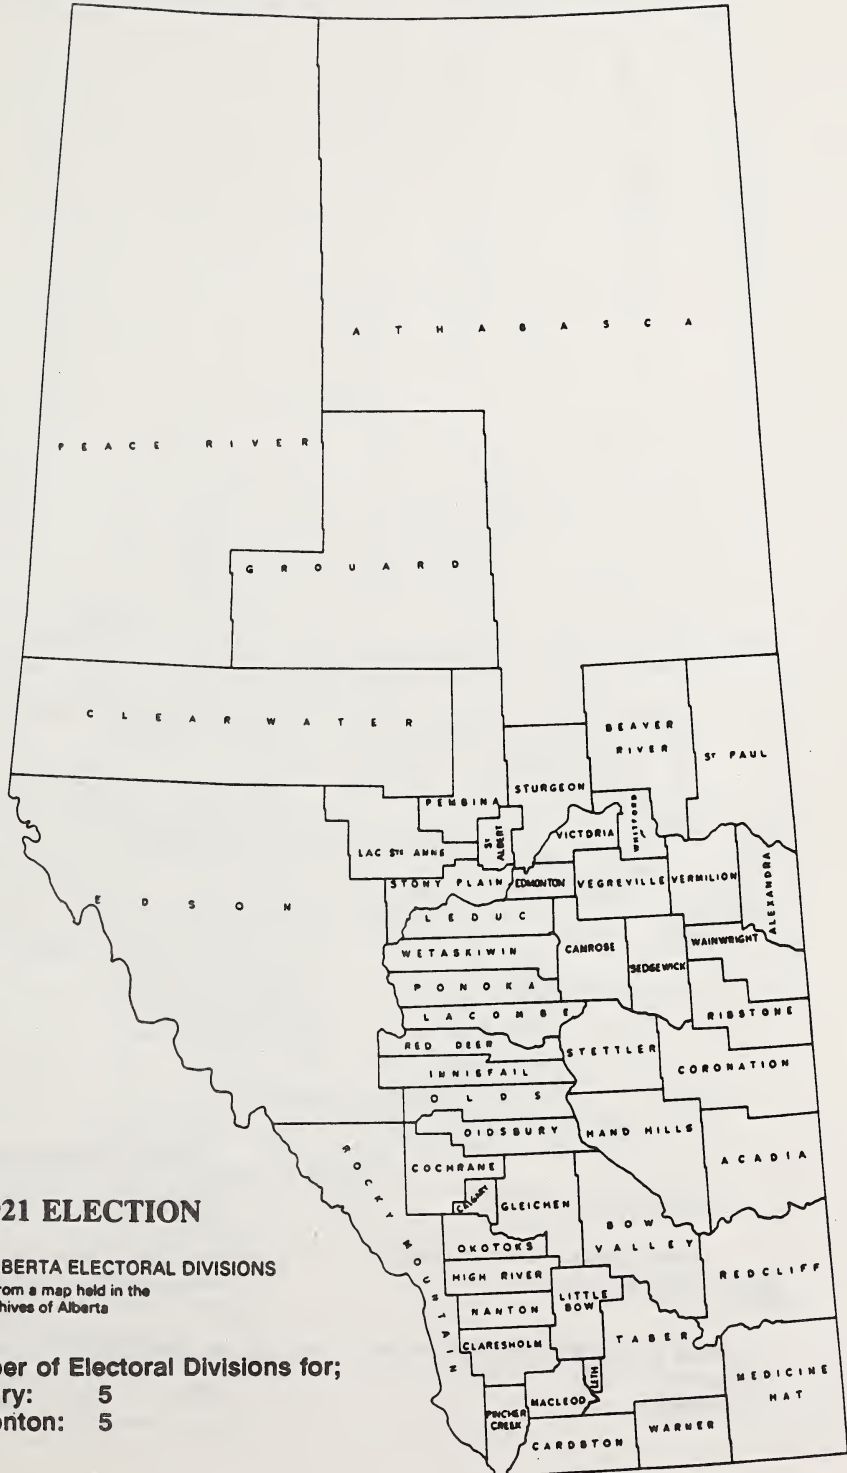

Court of Queen's Bench Justice Russell A. Dixon was named Chairman of the 1982 Commission. Following the submission of an interim report the commission held public hearings throughout the province before submitting its final report in 1984. The general elections in 1986 and 1989, with 83 constituencies, were based on the Dixon Commission's final report (see maps on pages 31 to 37).

B. Establishment of the Select Special Committee on Electoral Boundaries

In 1989 the Legislature amended the Electoral Boundaries Act to provide for the appointment of a select special committee to review the whole electoral boundary process and recommend an updated basis for the representation of Albertans in the Legislative Assembly.

In August 1989 a motion was passed by the Legislative Assembly appointing the all-party Select Special Committee on Electoral Boundaries to review issues and make recommendations affecting Electoral Boundaries Legislation. The Select Special Committee on Electoral Boundaries was established with the following members, namely;

Bob Bogle, MLA, Taber-Warner (Progressive Conservative), Chairman
 Stockwell Day, MLA, Red Deer-North (Progressive Conservative), Vice Chairman
 Pam Barrett, MLA, Edmonton-Highlands (New Democrat)
 Patricia Black, MLA, Calgary-Foothills (Progressive Conservative)
 Frank Bruseker, MLA, Calgary-North West (Liberal)
 Mike Cardinal, MLA, Athabasca-Lac La Biche (Progressive Conservative)
 Tom Sigurdson, MLA, Edmonton-Belmont (New Democrat)

C. Terms of Reference and Objectives

The Select Special Committee on Electoral Boundaries was given the mandate to consider and make recommendations on the following;

1. the appropriateness of the provisions of the Electoral Boundaries Commission Act,
2. the implications of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms for electoral boundaries and the distribution of constituencies,
3. the composition of the Commission and the process by which it is to carry out its responsibilities,
4. any legislation, legal decisions, and historic and current practises of Alberta or other Canadian jurisdictions relating to the distribution of constituencies and their boundaries,
5. any geographic, demographic and other factors that should be considered in the distribution of constituencies and the determination of their boundaries,
6. the impact of the determination of constituency boundaries on the ability of Members of the Legislative Assembly to fully discharge their duties to their constituents, and
7. any other factors that the committee reasonably considers relevant in the discharge of its duties.

D. Interim Report of the Committee

The committee was scheduled to report during the first sitting of the Second Session of the 22nd Legislature of Alberta. The committee held 29 public hearings in various locations throughout the province between November 2, 1989, and March 6, 1990. After the original 29 public hearings there were requests for 9 additional public hearings in addition to the Wainwright public hearing which was cancelled because of weather conditions and needed to be rescheduled. A motion was passed by the Select Special Committee on Electoral Boundaries on March 12, 1990:

"Be it resolved that as additional Public Hearings are necessary in the constituencies of Bow Valley, Dunvegan, Drumheller, Rocky Mountain House, St. Albert, Stettler, Westlock-Sturgeon, Wetaskiwin-Leduc, and Whitecourt, as well as Wainwright, where an earlier postponement occurred; and as House responsibilities of the Committee members can not be set aside until the spring sitting is completed, the Chairman will table a report and request an extension of time to deliver the final report in conjunction with this Committee's request for a fall sitting of the Second Session of the 22nd Legislature."

An interim report was submitted, as a series of three recommendations;

1. The Committee recommends authorization to continue its Public Hearings and deliberations beyond the first sitting of the Second Session of the 22nd Legislature, (as directed in the resolution dated 15 August 1989), and to be authorized to report to the Assembly in the second sitting of the Second Session of the 22nd Legislature in 1990.
2. The Committee recommends the Assembly now commit to a second sitting of the Second Session of the 22nd Legislature of Alberta in 1990 to receive the final report of the Committee.
3. The Committee recommends that the Assembly now receive and concur in this report.

On July 4, 1990, the Assembly passed a resolution to accept these resolutions. Subsequently the additional 10 hearings were held in August 1990 and the date for the receipt of written submissions was extended from February 28, 1990, to August 31, 1990. The deliberations resulting in this final report began in September 1990.

III. OVERVIEW

A. Meeting Arrangements

The first meeting of the Select Special Committee was held on August 28, 1989. An office was opened at 403 Legislature Annex under the direction of Bob Pritchard, Senior Administrator, to provide administrative support to the committee. All general meetings and public hearings, except for out-of-province and in-camera segments, were open to the public and recorded by Alberta Hansard. An embargo was placed on Hansard transcripts of deliberation meetings until the final report was completed and released. Full Hansard transcripts, and copies of written submissions are on file in the Legislature Library and available to the public. Minutes will be available on January 15, 1991.

B. Consultants

A number of meetings were held wherein individuals were called on as consultants to the committee. Consultants included lawyers, political scientists, previous Electoral Boundaries Commission chairmen and members, plus other relevant sources. By invitation and with the consensus of the three party leaders, the Chief Electoral Officer for Alberta, Pat Ledgerwood, joined the committee in an ongoing advisory capacity.

C. Public Hearings

To help fulfil the requirements of the committee's mandate a series of public hearings were arranged throughout Alberta. As well, written submissions were solicited. An information letter was drafted explaining the present situation with respect to electoral boundaries and the committee's mandate. This letter was distributed to over 10,000 Albertans by way of mail-outs and handouts to chairmen and members of various boards, agencies, community groups, individuals and groups who made inquiries, and persons who attended meetings and public hearings. As well Members of the Legislative Assembly were provided copies for distribution.

Advertisements were placed in appropriate daily and weekly newspapers and radio announcements were made in advance of each public hearing.

The committee held 39 Public Hearings in 30 locations: Barrhead, Brooks, Calgary, Cardston, Donnelly, Edmonton, Edson, Fort McMurray, Grande Prairie, Hanna, High Level, Lethbridge, Mayerthorpe, Medicine Hat, Peace River, Pincher Creek, Red Deer, Rockyford, Rocky Mountain House, Rycroft, St. Albert, St. Paul, Slave Lake, Stettler, Viking, Vulcan, Wainwright, Waskatenau, Westlock and Wetaskiwin (see map on page 43).

There were 5 public hearings in Calgary, 4 in Edmonton, 2 in both Red Deer and Hanna, and 1 in all other locations. Seven hundred and eighty Albertans attended the hearings with 340 persons making a total of 299 presentations to the committee. In addition 221 written submissions were received by mail as of August 31, 1990 (see map on page 44).

E. Out-of-Province Review

As background to help fulfill the committee's mandate to review other jurisdictions, committee members travelled to Victoria, British Columbia; Winnipeg, Manitoba; and Regina, Saskatchewan. Members met with various officials to learn of their respective province's experience in the area of electoral boundaries legislation.

The committee appreciates the assistance provided by the following:

October 5, 1989 Winnipeg, Manitoba;

Richard Balashko, Deputy Chief Electoral Officer
 Jay Cowan, M.L.A. Churchill (retired)
 Elijah Harper, M.L.A. Rupertsland

October 6, 1989 Regina, Saskatchewan;

Hon. Edward M. Culliton, C.C., Q.C. Retired Chief Justice of Saskatchewan
 Keith Lampard, Chief Electoral Officer

November 24, 1989 Victoria, British Columbia;

Larry Chalmers, MLA Okanagan South; Chairman Select Standing Committee on Labour, Justice and Intergovernmental Relations
 Harry Goldberg, Chief Electoral Officer
 Clifford Watt, Chief Legislative Counsel
 Don Duffy, Surveyor-General
 Craig James, Clerk of Committees

As well, comparative data were gathered from 10 provinces as well as the Yukon, Northwest Territories and federal jurisdictions (see charts I - VII on pages 46 to 55).

General Guidelines for Boundary Distribution

Alberta (current)

+ or- 25% urban, rural voter population as close as possible
Commission to endeavour to avoid establishing proposed rural electoral divisions which increase present size. Consider: community or diversity of interests, communication, physical features, sparsity and density of population and other similar and relevant factors.

Canada

+ or- 25% except Northwest Territories, Prince Edward Island, Yukon
Must stay close to the mean but can deviate due to: special geographic considerations including sparsity and density of population, accessibility, size, shape, and community or diversity of interests.

British Columbia

+ or- 25%
Deviation beyond + or- 25% in "very special circumstances" which are not outlined. To deviate from the mean they consider geography, demography, history, and community of interests.

Manitoba

+ or- 10% south of 53rd parallel
+ or- 25% north of 53rd parallel
This is the absolute maximum and to vary from the mean they consider: sparsity & density of population, relative rate of growth, accessibility, size, shape and any special diversity or community of interests.

New Brunswick

Used Municipal/County lines to split dual member ridings.

Newfoundland

+ or- 25% except Labrador, absolute variation
If variance from mean to occur, they consider: sparsity, density, relative rate of growth, accessibility, and size or shape, community or diversity of interests.

Nova Scotia

Determined by each Commission. Variance allowed has been + or- 33%.

Ontario

+ or- 25% except in "special circumstances". At least 15 districts are required in Northern Ontario.
They consider: community or diversity of interest, means of communication, topographical features; population trends, urban/rural conditions and requirements, municipal and ward boundaries, existing and traditional electoral district boundaries, and special geographic considerations.

Quebec	+ or- 25% They consider: population density, growth or contraction, accessibility, surface, configuration of region, natural boundaries and limits of Municipalities. There were 11 of 125 over the maximum +25% justified using above criteria plus desire to not add seats.
Saskatchewan	+ or- 25% (+ or- 50% for constituencies north of the "Dividing Line") These are maximums but to vary from mean they consider: sparsity, density, or population growth rate, size, means of communication, community or diversity of interests and all other similar or relevant factors.
Northwest Territories	Commission to consider geography, demography, sparsity, density, rate of growth, accessibility, and community or diversity of interests.
Yukon	Commission to consider: geography, density and relative rate of growth of population, accessibility, size, any special community or diversity of interests, communication, transportation and all other similar relevant factors.

F. Legal Overview

The redistribution challenge must be constitutionally sound and demographically responsible to all Albertans.

In addressing the question of redistribution and electoral boundary changes, the committee had to come to terms with differing points of view and opinions which were clearly expressed in the public forums and in the written submissions.

Two recurring themes repeatedly came to the fore through the wide ranges of topics brought forward by Albertans. The first was that the committee would give direction to the commission to approach redistribution with the aim of "one person, one vote" being the overriding principle. This would mean targeting each constituency as closely as possible to a population variance of zero from the provincial average.

The second recurring theme took the opposing view: that there could be a wide degree of variance from one constituency to another using a variety of factors to justify constituency differences of population.

It was the decision of the committee members that they did not have the luxury of arbitrarily or subjectively resolving this difference of views. Rather, the committee was cognizant of the fact that any direction which would be given by it to an Electoral Boundaries Commission through a report and subsequent legislation must be first and foremost founded securely on constitutional integrity, correctness, and soundness. For this reason, the committee was clearly guided by the principles enshrined in the 1989 B.C. Supreme Court judgment of the Honourable Chief Justice McLachlin in the case of Dixon v. the Attorney General of British Columbia [1989] 4 W.W.R. 393.

In this case, the petitioner, John Dixon, sought an order declaring invalid the B.C. legislation establishing provincial electoral districts on the grounds that it violated the guarantees of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

At issue in the B.C. situation was the large degree of variance in population between constituencies. This variance was as much as 150% in certain cases. Though the rate of variance in Alberta was not as extreme, it was nevertheless the opinion of the committee that Alberta's legislation in this matter must clearly reflect the constitutional and Charter realities brought forth by Chief Justice McLachlin, and must not offend them.

The questions facing the committee were the same questions clearly enunciated in Dixon (at page 402), namely "... is the equality of voting power absolute or relative? If it is not absolute, what limits are there on deviation from parity of voting power?"

As the committee analyzed the various arguments brought forward in Alberta on the question of variance, it realized that the Charter itself could not be interpreted in isolation but only using acceptable constitutional precedents and practice. In essence, the committee accepted the view of the Supreme Court of Canada in A.U.P.E. v. A.G. of Alberta [1987] 3 W.W.R. 577, at 636, as cited in Dixon (at page 404) that "... the Charter should not be regarded as an empty vessel to be filled with whatever meaning we might choose ... the interpretation of the Charter is constrained by the ... history, traditions, and underlying philosophies of our society..." The committee was bound by the realization expressed in Dixon (at page 405) that the guarantees of Section 3 of the Charter (the right to vote) and Section 15 (Equality rights)"... can only be understood in the context of an historical consideration of what the right to vote has meant in Canadian society... and can only be determined against the backdrop of the development of Canadian democratic rights..."

With these legal realities the committee faced the same questions which faced Chief Justice McLachlin in Dixon (at page 405), namely "... is absolute equality required?" and if this question is answered in the negative then "... [what is] the extent of permissible deviation from the ideal of equal representation...".

Canadian history, both pre and post Confederation clearly reflects a fundamental recognition of representation by population and the recognition of the importance of equality of voting power. The committee also realized that the concept of "one person, one vote" in its present sense is a reflection of American jurisprudence and history and does not reflect the Canadian historic development of legal principle on this point. Those who argue for "one person, one vote" (and therefore absolute equality of voting power without variance) are only taking into account American history and are overlooking important constitutional differences between the two systems. It must be remembered that the U.S. system both federally and at the state level handles regional population differences using a bicameral (two-house) system. The problem of regional differences of population at the U.S. congressional level is balanced by regional representation in the elected Senate. This problem is handled in a similar fashion at the state level. (On this point it is worthy of note that even given a bicameral system at the state level we still see total U.S. variances from absolute equality by as much as over 16% being allowed to stand without federal intervention).

The Canadian system does not have the ability to deal with the problem of regional population differences. It is for that reason that Albertans strongly endorse the concept of regional representation at the federal level through an equal and elected Senate system. (Some have even suggested this system at the provincial level as the only way to deal with the dilemma of absolute equality versus regional representation.) The concept of "one person, one vote" therefore is not consistent with Canadian law or history and is based on the American model which has a means of addressing regional disparity at both the federal and state levels.

Chief Justice McLachlin's expressions of Canadian constitutional and Charter realities on this point are helpful. When she observes (at page 407) that though "... the notion of equality is inherent in the Canadian concept of voting rights..." the petitioner (Dixon) "... relies on the American jurisprudence...". Chief Justice McLachlin then goes on to state (at page 408) "... it would be simplistic and wrong to infer, without more, that the Canadian concept of democracy dictates the same result. It is vital to recognize that it is Canadian, not American, constitutional history, values and philosophy which must guide this Court."

In this light, the committee felt that promoting an American concept as a resolution for the Alberta situation would be constitutionally in error as it "would do our own Constitution a disservice to simply allow the American debate to define the issue for us, all the while ignoring the truly fundamental structural differences between the two Constitutions..."(Dixon, at page 409).

Chief Justice McLachlin goes on to detail in precise language the manner in which the Charter and constitutional questions must be framed. The committee takes guidance from her on the following points of law:

1. "Democracy in Canada is rooted in a different history... a tradition which even in its more modern phases accommodates significant deviations from the ideals of equal representation..." (N.B. Underlining is added to original quotations)(page 409).
2. "Its origins lie not in the debates of the founding [U.S.] fathers, but in the less absolute recesses of the British tradition..."(page 409).
3. "... While population was an important factor in drawing electoral boundaries, weight must also be given to other factors ... while the principle of representation by population may be said to lie at the heart of electoral apportionment in Canada, it has from the beginning been tempered by other factors..." (page 410).
4. On the matter of absolute voter parity embraced by the American courts the committee must abide by the Canadian constitutional realities as stated in Dixon (at page 411). "... The historical and philosophical conditions which permit such a view in the United States is lacking in this country where it has been recognized from 1867 to the present that the ideal of equal voting power must be modified by other factors."
5. The committee is also compelled to allow regional differences to impact its deliberations in light of the fact that "... the only provision in the Constitution Act 1982 dealing with electoral appointment places [Section 42(1)(a)] regional considerations over strict 'rep by pop'..."(page 412).
6. In assessing the demands of some that Alberta electoral legislation must require absolute equality, or at least must target to absolute equality, the committee again is bound to accept the demands of the Charter and not the demands of those wishing to impose their own arbitrary views. The committee is directed by Chief Justice McLachlin's clear ruling in Dixon (page 413). "For these reasons I reject the petitioner's submission that Section 3 of the Charter requires absolute – or as near as practicable to absolute - equality within electoral districts" (emphasis added).

Having dealt with the question of "Absolute Equality" or even "As near as practicable to absolute equality" the committee then had to move on to look at the next question of "The Extent of Deviation from Equal Voting Power Permissible under Section 3 of the Charter". As already stated, though the rate of electoral variance in Alberta was not nearly as drastic and extreme as the variances which brought the B.C. distribution into a legal challenge, the committee still felt compelled by constitutional realities to be guided by court rulings to give an Alberta commission the guidelines to bring Alberta electoral distributions to a form consistent with the decision in Dixon.

The right of a provincial Legislature to determine the amount of deviation is clearly pointed out in Dixon. In determining the rate of variance a Legislature must "... act in accordance with such legal principles as may be found to be inherent in the Charter guarantee of the right to vote..." (page 413).

The committee studied the other Canadian jurisdictions to evaluate how each province (and the federal government) dealt with the question of degree of variance. (See Appendix for detailed breakdown). It was noted that the majority of provinces and the federal government used a guideline of 25% plus or minus from the mean and also included a provision for a small number of exceptions in each jurisdiction which allowed for a variance of greater than 25%. As an example, Ontario has a provision which allows for more than 10% of its constituencies to exceed the accepted 25% plus or minus, allowing in some cases a variance close to 60%. These exceptions were based on such factors as geography, topographical considerations, municipal and ward boundaries, etc. It is noteworthy that these deviations were not challenged even post-Dixon and were in place and accepted in the recent Ontario election.

Even given the examples of the majority of other Canadian jurisdictions (the federal government also uses a plus/minus 25% with a Northwest Territories exemption of 50%) the committee felt compelled to continue to be guided by Dixon, which is the most recent court ruling where Chief Justice McLachlin stated (at page 414) "... because equality of voting power is so important, it is appropriate to set limits beyond which it cannot be eroded ... such as the 25% limit applied in Canada...". As previously stated the Canadian limit also provides for a greater deviation based on certain considerations.

The direction then is clear. A Legislature can determine the variance, but limits must be clearly stated and reasons for variance must also be stated. This protects districts from having their voting power eroded to unconstitutional limits such as B.C.'s previous system which allowed variances of up to 150%. Again the committee defers to Chief Justice McLachlin (at page 414) "... what considerations are capable of justifying deviation from absolute equality of voting power ... that they contribute to better government of the populace ... regional issues ... geographical factors ... affecting the servicing of a riding ... regional interests [may be] justifiable ...".

In recognizing the rights of Provincial Legislatures on setting these considerations Dixon is clear (at page 414) that it is "... not the role of the courts to decide which factors and considerations are to be applied to each individual riding ... this task is within the responsibilities of the Legislature ...".

Therefore in developing the guidelines to be given to legislation and to the Alberta commission on electoral boundaries the committee has taken extreme caution and guidance from the constitutional, Charter, and court rulings on this matter.

The committee does not believe it has the right to advance propositions and proposals for electoral distribution (eg. strict one person, one vote) which do not emanate from our own history and which cannot be clearly supported by constitutional, Charter and court rulings.

The committee believes that the electoral boundary changes which will be subsequent to the legislation based on this report will reflect the overall concerns of all Albertans and most importantly reflect modern Canadian constitutional integrity, correctness, and soundness.

It is the considered opinion of the Select Special Committee on Electoral Boundaries that the Alberta guidelines stated in this report pass the above tests.

IV. COMMITTEE DELIBERATIONS

The committee emphasized that deliberations by the committee would not begin until the public hearing process was completed. This was done to assure Albertans that their views contributed to the resulting recommendations.

The committee worked to develop recommendations that would meet the principles of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms as well as take into account the input of Albertans who came to public hearings or wrote submissions. This input gave the committee an array of topics to consider, including:

- composition of the Electoral Boundaries Commission
- number of electoral divisions
- urban issues
- rural issues
- use of enumeration figures
- use of population figures
- communication and transportation issues
- requests to maintain electoral boundaries legislation as status quo
- rural/urban ratio
- number of organizations that Members of the Legislative Assembly work with
- range of variation from average; for example, + or- 25%
- one person, one vote
- redistribution frequency
- formula considerations
- special considerations
- urban/rural mix in electoral divisions
- the role of agriculture in the economy of Alberta
- Triple E Senate analogies
- boundary change effect on communities
- interrelationship of economics and representation
- numerous and varied other concerns, issues and topics

In the course of conducting public hearings, the committee heard from 164 individuals, 194 municipal councils, 21 school boards, 39 political organizations, 22 hospital boards, and 77 other organizations or groups.

The Committee had a formidable task: to evaluate the issues raised, to satisfactorily respond to the input from Albertans, to respond to the committee's mandate, to consider the implications of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, and to arrive at understandable and workable recommendations.

The basic issue to be addressed was equality and fairness to all Albertans. A clear message from Albertans articulated the need for provisions to ensure equality and fairness by considering geography, distances, population, community of interests, and other factors that affected the interrelationship of constituents and Members of the Legislative Assembly.

A. Initial Deliberation Results

Early in the deliberation process the committee agreed on a number of issues;

1. The number of electoral divisions in Alberta should remain at 83. Over the course of the public hearings and from written submissions the committee heard from Albertans that additional representation was not needed. Alberta ranks fourth in comparison to other provinces when considering the average population per electoral division. (see Chart VII on page 55).
2. Population should be the basis for redistribution. This would be fair, practical and in concert with the direction taken by a majority of other Canadian jurisdictions. Use the most recent Canada Census available.
3. No sitting Members of the Legislative Assembly should be part of the Electoral Boundaries Commission. This decision was made as Albertans clearly wanted as impartial and non-partisan a commission as possible.
4. The Chief Electoral Officer should be designated as a member of the Electoral Boundary Commission. The Chief Electoral Officer has the background data, statistics, and expertise relative to the actual setting of boundaries, preparation of maps, and the process of enumeration.
5. The Rural/Urban electoral division split to be discarded. New definitions will be created that look at Alberta from the perspective of municipalities. The new electoral divisions will be designated Single-Municipality Electoral Divisions and Multi-Municipality Electoral Divisions. The committee came to the conclusion that a new way of looking at the differentiating of electoral boundaries was necessary to help pull Albertans together for the betterment of Alberta as a whole.
6. Discussion over the course of deliberations led to the formation of three other recommendations;
 - a) To help effect balanced growth throughout Alberta.

Rural Albertans repeatedly articulated to the Committee the plight of rural centres that are in an economic slump from the downturn of the early 1980's, and from which they have not recovered. Young adults are leaving farms and small centres, businesses are closing up, and in order to survive and support their families farmers are giving up on rural Alberta and migrating to the cities. There were expressions of grave concern that population shifts from low-growth areas would further erode small population centres struggling to maintain their identity with and contribution to Alberta's history and future. The committee received clear messages that it is vital to all Albertans that the serious economic decline of smaller population centres in Alberta be curtailed.

- b) To encourage the use of All-Party Committees

Due in part to the strong team approach of the Select Special Committee on Electoral Boundaries and the positive experience of sharing perspectives as Members of the Legislative Assembly, a recommendation arose to support increased use of all-party committees.

- c) To support a review of services provided to Members of the Legislative Assembly.

The committee reviewed services provided to Members of the Legislative Assembly to assist them in carrying out their duties in their constituencies. The use of Regional Information Telephone Enquiries lines, facsimile machines, computers, appropriate transportation allowances, and other relevant communication supports were discussed. It was agreed a review of these supports to ensure full availability of use by Members of the Legislative Assembly, in particular those serving large and remote constituencies, should be undertaken by the Special Standing Committee of the Assembly on Members' Services.

B. Percentage Variation Formula

A number of options were put forward by committee members on the issue of the percentage variation between ridings. They were:

1. +or- 25% with justifiable variation (target to mean population)
2. target to +or- 10% but to +or- 25% for exceptional considerations
3. +or- 25% with variation up to a maximum +or- 35% with justifiable criteria
4. +or- 25% with extreme criteria to -50%
5. 3. (above) with Canada/Alberta line to set aside northern areas as special consideration areas, as well as extreme south. One area north of the line with unlimited +or-%.
6. half of Assembly elected on one person one vote basis;
half of Assembly elected on regional representation basis
7. two formulas: urban average/rural average
8. maintain status quo

The committee relied heavily on the McLachlin decision in British Columbia (see Legal Overview page 56) while striving to incorporate the wishes of Albertans who spoke of fairness to those within and outside major population centres. In larger urban centres the committee heard some arguments supporting one person, one vote, with others supporting regional representation. From less populated areas people were worried they would lose or see a lessening of their voice in the Legislature if electoral divisions were transferred to large population centres from small population centres. As well, it was recognized that the representation by population formula, or one person one vote, is only half of the American system. The other half is regional representation in the American Senate. The committee thought it important to keep in mind that Canada follows the British parliamentary system which combines representation by population with regional representation.

With reference to options referring to extreme or justifiable criteria the following were considered;

1. total area of constituency
2. total settled area
3. communication and transportation
4. community and diversity of interests
5. distance from capital
6. low tax base
7. no population centre over a specified number
8. dramatic loss of population due to economic factors
9. low per capita income (below provincial average)
10. number of local jurisdictions (i.e. municipalities, hospital and school boards, et cetera)

The committee explored a number of areas while considering exceptions. There was discussion and review of services to assist Members of the Legislative Assembly in their duties; e.g. aircraft allowances, facsimile machines, computer and telephone equipment. While there may be ways to assist Members of the Legislative Assembly with technical support, Albertans clearly identified that they wanted the face-to-face meetings with their Member of the Legislative Assembly to no lesser extent than currently available.

A number of jurisdictions have exceptions to their general guidelines for boundary distribution. Those exceptions are in place to allow for variance in special circumstances and include factors such as population trends, community or diversity of interests, communication factors, topographic features, tradition, special geographic features, sparsity, accessibility and other relevant factors (see Chart V page 52).

It is relevant to note that when considering the 13 Canadian jurisdictions, Canada, Alberta, British Columbia, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, New Brunswick, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, Ontario, Prince Edward Island, Quebec, Northwest Territories and Yukon, 8 have provisions to allow deviation from their general electoral division guidelines and 7 have utilized these special provisions. It is clearly a Canadian tradition that consideration be given for extenuating circumstances in order to effect fair representation.

It was therefore decided that the option of +or- 25% with extreme criteria to -50% was fairest to all Albertans and adhered as closely as possible to Alberta tradition and history.

At least 95% of the electoral divisions should be required to meet the criteria of +or- 25%. After review and discussion of the 10 indicators, the criteria list was shortened to seven criteria to be considered for up to 5% of electoral divisions where conditions warrant special consideration. The 5% ceiling and the list of criteria are necessary to ensure that any Electoral Divisions that qualify for special consideration are indeed in extraordinary circumstances. The seven criteria are;

1. total area of constituency over 20,000 square kilometres,
2. total settled area (surveyed) over 15,000 square kilometres,
3. communication and transportation: over 1000 kilometres of primary and secondary roads,
4. community and diversity of interests of the inhabitants,
5. distance from capital of at least 150 kilometres,
6. no population centre over 4,000, and
7. dramatic loss of population, due to economic factors, as indicated by comparison of the previous and current Federal Census.

C. Electoral Divisions Definitions

Past electoral boundaries legislation divided Alberta into rural and urban electoral divisions. Clearly, as demonstrated by Albertans at public hearings, a serious rift between these two groups has developed. A number of urban constituents believe they are under represented, when considering numbers, while the rural constituents maintain that anything less than their current level of representation is unfair. Each group related to the other in an adversarial manner which does not lead to effective resolution of mutual concerns. The committee therefore decided, in the best interests of Alberta as a whole, that new electoral division classifications were needed to help do away with urban and rural friction. It was recognized that this option would lead to potential change for each and every electoral division. Some changes will be minimal; however most will be major and significant. To this end the committee defined two new ways to look at the electoral divisions, namely, single-municipality electoral divisions and multi-municipality electoral divisions.

A Single-Municipality Electoral Division is one where the entire division is within one municipality.

A Multi-Municipality Electoral Division is one where the division includes two or more municipalities.

The largest population centres, Calgary and Edmonton, have not seen their percentage of the total population of Alberta change significantly since 1971. Tables 1 and 2 on the following page outline percentages of the population in relation to percentages of Members of the Legislative Assembly that represent Calgary and Edmonton electoral districts.

Factors to be considered in establishing multi-municipality electoral divisions include sparsity and density of population; community interests including Indian Reservations, Metis Settlements, Special Areas and Improvement Districts; number of municipalities, school boards, hospital boards, etc.; geographical features including existing road systems; and understandable clean boundaries.

It was further determined that there should be 43 single-municipality electoral divisions as follows:

-Calgary:	19 electoral divisions
-Edmonton:	17 electoral divisions
-Lethbridge:	2 electoral divisions
-Medicine Hat:	1 electoral division
-Red Deer:	1 electoral division
-St. Albert:	1 electoral division
-Sherwood Park:	1 electoral division
-Fort McMurray:	1 electoral division

As well there should be 40 multi-municipality electoral divisions to include:

- part of the city of Red Deer
- part of the city of Medicine Hat
- part of the city of St. Albert
- city of Grande Prairie to be split
- Other cities and smaller centres. May include parts of Edmonton or Calgary.

Table 1. Percentage of Alberta's Population for Calgary and Edmonton

	Federal Census 1971		Federal Census 1986
		%		%
Calgary	403,319	25	636,104	27
Edmonton	438,152	27	573,982	24
Balance of Alberta	786,403	48	1,164,914	49
Total	1,627,874	100	2,375,000	100

According to the 1971 census Calgary and Edmonton held 52% of the population of Alberta, based on the 1986 census Calgary and Edmonton held 51% of the population of Alberta.

Table 2. Percentage of Members of the Legislative Assembly for Calgary and Edmonton

	1971		1986		Recommended
	# MLA's	% MLA's	# MLA's	% MLA's	# MLA's	% MLA's
Calgary	13	17	18	22	19	23
Edmonton	16	21	17	20	17	20
Balance of Alberta	46	62	48	58	47	57
Total	75	100	83	100	83	100

In 1971 Calgary and Edmonton had 38% of the Members of the Legislative Assembly representing 52% of the population and in 1986 had 42% of the Members of the Legislative Assembly representing 51% of the population. If the recommendations of the Select Special Committee on Electoral Boundaries are implemented Calgary and Edmonton would see an increase to 43% of the Members of the Legislative Assembly representing 51% of Alberta's population.

D. Commission Structure

A number of submissions dealt with actual boundary detail which will be part of the work of the Electoral Boundaries Commission. To that end, any submissions, presentations, or parts thereof that referred directly to boundary questions, rather than legislative questions, will be referred to the next Electoral Boundaries Commission.

Albertans generally voiced the opinion that they wanted membership of the commission to be as nonpartisan as possible and wanted a commission comprised of voices that would represent all of Alberta, not one segment.

The committee developed the following list of options to consider;

1. a judge,
the Chief Electoral Officer,
2 rural representatives,
2 urban representatives, and
1 representative at large.
7 person commission
2. the Chief Electoral Officer,

1 Official Opposition in consultation] appointed by with other Opposition] the Speaker
5* person commission
6. Same as (e) with Chief Justice or designate from the bench

* At least 2 of 5 from Alberta cities and at least 2 of the 5 from outside the cities.

 Administrative support to be provided by the Senior Administrator of the Select Special Committee on Electoral Boundaries.

The committee wanted to keep the commission as small as possible to facilitate their activities. The committee decided that five members would be most suitable (see Chart II page 47). It was further decided that option 5 was the most appropriate structure namely; a judge (Chairman), the Chief Electoral Officer, two persons nominated by the Premier, one person nominated by the Official Opposition in consultation with the other opposition; at least two of five from Alberta Cities and two of five from outside cities; administrative support to be provided by the Senior Administrator of the Select Special Committee on Electoral Boundaries.

With reference to Electoral Boundaries Legislation, which guides Electoral Boundaries Commissions, two options were raised;

1. direction by legislation (current legislation), or
2. general guidelines.

After consulting with the Chief Electoral Officer and in the interests of providing a solid framework for the commission to complete their work efficiently and effectively option 1, giving definitive legislation to the Commission, was chosen.

The Committee wished to ensure the work of the Electoral Boundaries Committee is carried out as quickly as possible without compromising the process of their work. It was decided that the Electoral Boundaries Commission should be deemed to be struck on the date of the Assent of Electoral Boundaries Legislation and further, rather than 12 months the Electoral Boundaries Commission should, after considering any representation to it and within nine months of the date on which the commission is appointed, submit to the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly a report which delineates the boundaries of the proposed electoral divisions.

In consideration of length of time between redistribution six options were examined;

1. interim redistribution after next election
2. full redistribution after each election
3. current: redistribution after every second election
4. after every second election but not less than every eight years
5. after every 10 years
6. after every census (five years) and every second election

The committee considered various practicalities including tie-in with federal census, date of availability of census results, fiscal responsibility considering the Electoral Boundaries Commission operational costs, and redistribution time lines in other Canadian jurisdictions (see Chart VI page 54).

The Committee chose option 4; after every second election but not less than every eight years. The Chief Electoral Officer shall report, following each Canadian Census, variations outside the +or- 25% range.

E. Acknowledgements

The Select Special Committee on Electoral Boundaries acknowledges, with great appreciation, the support provided by Albertans to the committee during the past 15 months.

Volunteers across Alberta went out of their way to assist with transportation, meals, and various arrangements at our public hearing sites.

Individuals who performed duties for the committee on a fee for services basis deserve thanks for their professional expertise and commitment. Special thanks in this regard are given to Doug Jeneroux of Chroma Communications, Tomislav Milinusic of Axion Spatial Imaging, and Dale Smith of Smith and Smith Associates, all of whom worked diligently with the committee.

Government employees from departments and agencies were exceptionally helpful in data collection and research and many went out of their way to facilitate our work. Special mention goes to the Chief Electoral Officer, Pat Ledgerwood and staff, who provided relevant historical background and advice.

Staff from the various divisions of the Legislative Assembly Office provided a variety of valuable support services. In particular the staff of Alberta Hansard, who faithfully recorded meetings and public hearings, are commended for their skill as well as their willingness to assist in other areas when the need arose.

Many thanks are due to the committee's administration under the direction of Bob Pritchard assisted by Ted Edwards, Karen Hudson, Robin Wortman, and Wendy Grosfield. Their dedication, hard work, and good humour were invaluable.

The committee is grateful for the way people from across the province responded to the committee's mandate to learn how Albertans want to be represented in the Legislature. Many took the time and effort to attend public hearings. Albertans came to give presentations, others chose to send in written submissions, while some did both. Still others came to public hearings to listen or to comment. All were welcome and appreciated.

The Select Special Committee on Electoral Boundaries wishes to thank Albertans who became involved and made this study of electoral boundaries legislation one of the most comprehensive in the history of Alberta.

All participants have reason to be proud of their involvement and contribution to the democratic process.
